

SQUIRREL

Saving is your style and you're proud of it. You like to prepare for a rainy day and happily stash away plenty of nuts during the autumn in preparation for the winter ahead. You hoard in multiple locations with several investments across different forests. Just remember to check in on your stash from time to time....

DOG

Financial security is your thing and you put it above most other affairs. You're loyal and faithful to one idea, person or plan. Your doggedness may also mean that you have a one-track mind when it comes to your money and, once your head is down sniffing out the track, you tend to ignore all other avenues. However, this may mean you don't take in the wider view or consider other options.

CHIMP

You feel bad when you have a surplus of money and it can sometimes tug on those guilt strings. You show great compassion towards others and you're always aware if you have something that someone else may want or need. You can often be found to help out others around you even when there is no personal gain to be had.

LION

You are able to save. It's just sometimes that MUST HAVE thing pops along and screams YOU NEED ME. But what's wrong with that? You never can tell what the future holds, or where your next meal is coming from, so you like to make the most of a good thing whilst can you have it.

FERRET

Money is power and power is money. Your ultimate goal is to continually increase your wealth. You're always looking for ways to save smarter and make your money grow. Some may call you tenacious. You call it clever and cunning.

ANTELOPE

You like to have a sense of control over your finances and so monitor them closely, keeping a constant track of your financial situation. You don't like change and are easily scared and skittish, so always keep one eye on the horizon.

KANGAROO

Money is your source of adventure and freedom. You love taking great leaps of faith and taking risks with your cash. There's nothing you like more than jumping from one adventure to the next, because who knows where that might lead you...

OSTRICH

When your head is buried in the sand, you think all your problems disappear. The thing is you know that's not really true. The longer you keep your head down, the bigger your worries will get. This is particularly true of your fears around your finances. You hate managing your money so much that you'll do anything you can to avoid daily financial tasks. At some point, things need to be addressed. Why not make a start today.

HYENA

You're a stranger to savings and a belligerent to budgeting. You run at full speed, using all your resources up in one go. You find great pleasure in accumulating masses of possessions quickly. This could be because you like to show off or it could simply be out of boredom and the need for something to do. Who cares? You look great!

My Animal(s): _____

Date: _____

We hope you enjoyed this as a fun way to think about yourself and money.

See you in February!

